A book called "Running" has sold nearly 500,000 copies and has been No. I on the best-seller lists for weeks. Five of the top 15 trade paperbacks deal directly with health and fitness. Dollars spent on sporting goods have gone from $2.2 bil-

Sweat Chic

Think They're Better Than You

Clearly, sweat chic is in. A recent Washington Post national telephone survey confirmed that more Americans are doing more to get their bodies toned up and tapered down. And yet, the same poll indicated that many also are doing less.

In the survey, conducted in February, 30 percent said that they were doing more to keep themselves physically fit than they had in the past, 40 percent said that they were doing the same amount and 28 percent responded that they were doing

Fifty-two percent said that they engaged in exercise or physical sports in their leisure time. but 45 percent said that they did

"No, those figures don't surprise me," said Casey Conrad, executive director of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, "Most people just can't seem to manage their lives. Look at the people who smoke. They tell you I know I sbouldn't smoke, but I can't stop.' It's the same with exercise. Everybody knows you should do it, but they won't. All you can do is try to get the word out, give them the truth, hammer away at them through the media." "Those are rather disturbing

figures," said sports psychologist Thomas Tutko of San Jose State University, "I wish I could explain it. I can just say the people know who do less are fairly fixed in their habits. They've been smoking or overeating all their lives, and it's difficult to get out of those patterns." "I would like to think that wasn't the case," said Dr. Samuel

Fox, a Georgetown University cardiologist and member of the President's Council. "But I suppose I can also understand why they re doing less. There are those who bave been told by their jogging friends, for instance, about the great joy of running. So they go out, they get the shoes and the sweatsuits and they try it incorrectly. They try and recapture their youth, they go at it almost too vigorously. They get aches and pains, sore knees or shin splints and they say the hell with this."

But Dr. Fox and Dr. Tutko would prefer to talk about the positive aspects of the fitness

*Cardiovascular disease is down most markedly." Dr. Fox said. "Studies are showing that middle-aged men are stopping smoking, that middle-aged people of both sexes are losing weight, that considerable numbers of people are cutting out saturated fats and, of course, that more are exercising.

Therapeutic Value

Dr. Tutko added: "The people who are doing more have a variety of reasons. They feel good just because they're doing something for themselves. And once they start an exercise or running program, they look upon the time they spend on the activity as their time alone, a peaceful time, a getaway time when they can let their minds go. It's very thera-peutic. It's also had a pronounced effect on their sex lives. There's a hormonal change as well as the simple fact that people who are more active physicalseem to have more energy, and they're more capable of perform-

On the controversial issue of the Israeli-occupied West Bank, the Begin administration equates retaining territory with security.

Remarks Discussed

Mr. Begin discussed Mr. Mondale's remarks with the vice president at their final meeting yes-terday morning, and Mr. Mondale was asked about this at a news conference afterward, before his departure for Egypt.

"We were not arguing that the plan on the Sinai automatically ap-plies to the West Bank," Mr. Mon-dale said. "There are obviously many differences. I was referring to the concept of separating territory from security. It may be possible to relinquish land but at the same time have guarantees over demilitarization, over electric sensors, imited-force zones, other kinds of arrangements that can give you the security even though there may be certain portions of land that you decide not to bold."

The reaction of a ranking official nf the Begin administration to Mr. Mondale's remarks was blunt. From 1951 until the nation's bomb testing was moved under-ground in 1962, 87 aboveground nuclear tests were conducted at the Nevada proving grounds west of here. Dr. Joseph Lyon, who runs the Utah State Cancer Registry. says that 20 to 26 of those tests sent fallout clouds into Utah.

The southwestern part of the state received heavy fallout and winds carried radioactivity over an area from the Grand Canyon almost to Salt Lake City. About 20,000 people lived in the Nevada. Arizona and close-in Utah areas.

Fear, Heightened

The fears have been heightened by recent disclosures of leukemia among soldiers present at a 1957 test blast, "Project Smoky."

President Carter in May assigned the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to examine the effects of low-level radiation on parlicipants in nuclear tests and workers in government nuclear facilities, citing the deaths among soldiers.

In addition, the department is expected to reopen soon the only major investigation ever conducted into the health effects of nuclear testing on civilians, which involved 2,000 schoolchildren in two south ern Utah counties.

That 1960s investigation, which officials at the time acknowledged may have stopped too soon, found no adverse impact on the young-sters, who were tested for thyroid abnormalities. That iest has been relied on hy nuclear testing officials as proof of the safety of the tests.

But even a renewal of the HEW effort would fall short of the widespread investigation that one radio-logical health expert at the Univer-sity of Utah says is warranted.

'Ticking Like a Bomb'

"We had a whole damn region subjected to one after another of these fallout patterns over a long period of time," said Dr. Robert Pendleton, "and some of [the radiation) was rather high. "There's a lot of potential health damage ticking like a bomb," he said, "and nobody's even trying to find out if there's a problem." Both Dr. Pendleton and Dr. Dan

Hoffman, an epidemiologist with HEW's Bureau of Radiological Health, cite the 10-year-or-more delay in the appearance of thyroid abnormalities, some of which were cancerous, among residents of a Pacific island downwind of test blasts

One of the nice things about sailing to New York on Queen Elizabeth 2 is that it's very, very roomy.

About 150 times roomier than a jumbo jet, in fact. This means that there's not only more room for you and your family. There's also more room for all the other things you want to take with you.

You can have four pieces of luggage in your cabin, and keep a further two pieces in the baggage room. And use up to 25 cubic feet in the hold. Free. Only after that will it cost you $3 a cubic foot to store anything else in the hold.

Abundance of Methane

Found in Distant Space

By Thomas O'Toole WASHINGTON, July 4 (WP) -Methane, the major constituent of natural gas and a prominent product of biologic decay, has been found to be even more abundant in distant space than on earth, Scientists have detected methane in three locations: the Orion A gas cloud, the gas clouds surrounding a variable star known simply as RX Boo, and carbon star identified as IRC-plus-10216. The methane measurements were made using a radio telescope at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Green-bank, W. Va., and a oewer, more precise radio telescope at Kitt Peak in Arizona. This was the first detection of methane outside our solar system," said Dr. Kenneth Fox of the Goddard Space Flight Center, one of two scientists who made the finding. "Methane appears to be one of the most abundant molecules in Orion A, perhaps second only to hydrogen.

Dr. Fox and Goddard's Dr. Donald Jenoings said the discovery of methane "provides the missing link for the possible production in the cosmos of amino acids." the building blocks of protein and the foundation of life.

Life, Liberty and So Forth

never a bad date on which to consider the present condition of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness in the United States. Those benefits need to be guarded and nourished continually - particularly the second one. liberty - if they are to flourish. The men who drafted the Declaration of Independence had clear and precise ideas about politics. What would they say if they could see how the United States seems to be turning out now, 202 years later?

They would be deeply dismayed to discover that 218 million people are living in this country. How can a nation with such a vast population he self-governing? The original literry of dentocracy assumed small communities of citizens who knew each other well. At the time of the Declaration, the most populous of the states was Virginia, with half a million people. That's hardly more than a congressional district's population today. Mr. Jefferson would be assounded to learn that U.S. political practice had somehow managed to adapt the original republican principles to a large and, worse, highly urban population.

The complaint against George III, you will recall, was essentially that he refused to pay attention to his American subjects. He wasn't cruel or vicious. While Americans complained endlessly about the high taxes that he collected, in fact they were far lower than taxes in Britain. But he was slow to respond to colonial pleas, and jealous of his prerogatives. He refused assent to laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the common good - and when the colonials tried to press him or to circumvent him, he harassed them in, occasionally, very petty ways,

Acquaintance with George III left the Jeffersonians deeply prejudiced not only against kings, but against large bureaucracies, standing armies and centralized administration as well. The United States does not have a king. but it has certainly acquired the other attributes over the years, Mr. Jefferson would ask: How do you deal with the arrogance of dis-

July Fourth - Independence Day - is tant officials, when there are so many of you? The answer would be: Well, we complain a lot, and change presidents pretty frequently - and we go to court a lot more than you ever expected us to. The courts have become the individual citizen's avenue for making the government pay attention. Mr. Jefferson would be bemused. The process seems to work, but not as he had intended.

> Liberty was easier to define when a citizen, if he got fed up, could pick up his ax and gun and head off into a farther valley to clear his own land. The opportunity to work and earn wages was never an issue in a country with an open frontier and the endless promise of free land. The idea that there is no longer a frontier, and that just about every foot of this huge continent is now owned by somebody, would be deeply troubling to Mr. Jefferson. He would ask: You have become like Europe, then? How do you keep the rich who own the land from impoverishing and exploitiong the poor? The answer seems to be that we have done it by building industry, so that wealth is no longer the land alone, and by forcing industrial companies to recognize public interests as well as their own. Of course, the companies complain and they, too, go to court frequently; the courts are rather crowded these days.

As for the pursuit of happiness, Americans have been too wise ever to try to define it. The word "pursuit" means that each citizen is invited to work out his or her own definition. But for most people, surely, it includes a fair chance to make the most of one's own abilities, and to pursue an education as far as one wishes. The greatest achievement of this last generation has been the remarkable expansion of high schools, colleges and universities with doors open to the whole population. They reflect one of the noblest of the 18th century's ideals, and they are the aspect of U.S. life of which, we suspect, Mr. Jefferson and his friends would most heartily

THE WASHINGTON POST.

The violence in Rhodesia is sickening. Defenseless European missionaries are being murdered in numbers, apparently by guerrillas intent on intimidating the rural population and undermining the government's control of the countryside. Government forces have taken to killing scores of Africans by firing mass volleys into village groups suspected of heing hostile.

The war's weekly death toll is now estimated at 100; if Rhodesia had the population of the United States, the figure would be 3,000. In seven years some 9,000 people, mostly Africans, have been killed; that is upwards of 270,000 on a U.S. scale. Last month two Swiss and an African performing the civilizing mission of the International Committee of the Red Cross were found dead outside their marked vant, shot in the back of the head. It is not possible to tell which side is more responsible for the spreading savagery. Both are responsible.

In Britain, some of the Conservative opposition, aroused by atrocities against British missionaries, suggest that the carnage should be laid at the feet of the Labor government. If the government had embraced the settlement fashioned by Ian Smith and the "internal" black nationalists last March, the argument goes, the "external" nationalists would not have been encouraged to fight on and the war would be winding down now. There are similar incipient mutterings in the United

But that line of argument is simplistic. It should not have to be demonstrated, after Vietnam, that guerrilla wars cannot be turned off or on in foreign capitals. The guerrillas wish to demoralize their foes and, specifically, to render unfeasible the elections that constitute the one means by which the Salisbury administration could validate its claim to popular acceptance. The internal people have largely failed to persuade the guerrillas to put down their arms and they must now try to defeat them in the field. Cruel as it is, that is the political logic of the war.

One result that the widening war ensures is that the country the victor inherits will be an African Lebanon, a disaster area in terms of human and political relations and probably in terms of economic viability, too. A political compromise along lines suggested by the United States and Britain is the one conceivable way to diminish the violence, but as Salisbury's position becomes more desperate. the Popular Front's seems to harden. That is a formula for more killing.

China: A More Open Economy

Chinese Vice-Premier Li Hsien-nien is reported to have told a British delegation in Peking that China would in future borrow from banks abroad. This suggests the Chinese government has now got over its ideological antagonism to borrowing. China is ntoving toward a more open economy with more extensive contacts with the West.

China's reasons lie in the massive investment program over the next seven years that Chairman Hua Kuo-feng announced to the National People's Congress in March. The number of Chinese missions shopping for equipment abroad are a firm indication that the Chinese are serious about their declared intentions to purchase foreign technology. Its demand for capital goods will be limited by the capacity of China's ports, roads and managerial skills to handle such a massive program in so short a time. It will try to buy as much as possible on barter terms. China is running a comfortable external account. On the record of its other commercial transactions, China's approach to new borrowing is likely to be cautious. There will be no grand leap into the international markets as many banks would like.

U.S.-Cyprus: Latest Phase

The latest phase of the Cyprus conflict, since the beginning of April, has been dominated less by the Turkish proposals handed to Kurt Waldheim in Vienna than by President Carter's decision to ask Congress to lift the U.S. arms embargo against Turkey. Clearly the Turkish proposals and Mr. Carter's request are related, but not in the obvious way that one might think. His argument is not that the embargo has done its work, but that it has achieved nothing, or at least nothing positive.

The Consequences of Bhutto's Fate

By Hugh Trevor-Roper

OXFORD, England — In the Supreme Court of Pakistan. the last legal battle is now being fought over the life of the country's former Prime Minister. Zulfikar Áli Bhutto. It is an unequal battle in which justice has been overshadowed by power. As an old friend of Mr. Bhutto, I am personally con-cerned for his life. But there may well be grave political consequenc-es too. His death could lead to the end of Pakistan and a further defeat for the West.

The charge against Mr. Bhutto is that in 1974 he ordered the murder of an obscure political opponent whose father was killed in an ambush allegedly prepared against that opponent. Trial in the High Court ended in March, and Mr. Bhutto has spent the succeeding months in the condemned cell, awaiting death by hanging — unless the Supreme Court should reverse the verdict or the president reduce the penalty.

I have read the judgment of the High Court in Lahore and the arguments on which it is based. It rests entirely on hearsay and on the tainted evidence of accomplices. The verdic1 was announced to the government before the trial began, the defense was hampered through-out, and the presiding judge, who is a government official, expressed hias and animus against the defendant. The judgment is, in fact, simply the prosecution case, which alone was heard in open court.

Grossly Unfair In saying this, I do not rely on my own lay judgment. Early in the trial, Mr. Bhutto's family asked me to secure the advice of the best and most respected English criminal lawyer. I approached a distinguished lawyer, who flew out to Pakistan, atlended the court, and has seen the evidence. His report, which he has repeated in public, was that the trial was grossly unfair, that the evidence would be inadmissable in British law (on which Pakistani law is based), and that so weak a case should not even been brought to court.

Clearly, if the trial is political, we must see it in a political context. Politics have determied the trial of Mr Bhutto. How will they affect its outcome, or be affected by it?

The basic fact is that the army is the sole public force in Pakistan. and having generally ruled the country, presumes that it has a natural right to rule. Unfortunately its rule has not always been politically intelligent. In 1970 it collapsed in civl war. foreign war, defeat, parti-tion, almost disintegration. Thereupon power fell to civilian politi-cians who had the support of the popular parties: in the East to Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, the charismatic leader of the Awami League: in the West to Mr. Bhutto, founder and leader of the Pakistan

People's Party.
In that hour of disaster, Mr. Bhutto saved what was left of Pakistan. He prevented further disintegration, restored viability, independence and morale. However his domestic politics were too midical for some, and no doubt he made some mistakes. Meanwhile, the discredited generals recovered their nerve and sought to recover power. The first to strike were those in East Pakistan. rnw Bangladesh. They hrutally murdered Sheikh Mujib and all his family and set up a military regime under Mah. Gen. Ziaur Rahman, the Zia of the East.

In West Pakistan, the generals had to wait a little longer, but in July. 1977 they too saw their chance. At first they had hoped to see Mr. Bhutto routed in elections. like Mrs. Indira Gandhi in India: but when this failed they too proceeded to force. Accusing him of rigging the election, they arrested him and replaced him by the present military regime of Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, the Zia of the West.

Of course, this Gen. Zia began with protestations of virtue. He disowned any plan for military rule. He promised free elections. He de-clared freedom of the press. We need not dwell on these promises. Now that his military rule is established, all politics have been forbidden: there is no sign of elections; and erring journalists are flogged. In such circumstances many Pakistanis now regret Mr. Bhutto, the only civilian ruler in the last 20 years, the only politician of stature, achievement and international opment. Gen. Zia had to adjust his course. At first, it seems, he had in-tended only to displace Mr. Bbutto. Even when he had mounted the murder trial, he did not envisage a death sentence. Five years in prison would disqualify Mr. Bhuito from a political career, and that, surely. would be enough. But gradually it became clear that it might not be enough. Mr. Bhutto was too big to be held by such paper fetters. Disqualified imprisoned, exiled, he would always be a danger, so long as he was alive. No doubt Gen. Zia now wishes that, like his colleague in the East. he had been relieved of this inconvenient civilian and all his family by summary action. As it is, better late than never.

In March, when the court in Lahore pronounced the death sen-tence, Gen. Zia no doubt thought he was safe. However, there has been a new development. Murdering politicians is a game at which bow usurping military rulers may be removed; It also directly threatens Pakistan. By reviving the ambidons of a greater Afghanistan. the Communist regime in Kahul can recreate the same threat of to-tal disintegration from which Mr. Bbutto saved bis country in 1970. And this time the threat may be backed by a great power, Commu-

He will not, by destroying all possibility of a middle way, drive the supporters of Mr. Bhutto underground and leave no alternauve but Islamic reaction or Communist revolution. Against a serious external threat, internal reconciliation is essential

Can he hear the voice of reason when his head is so deeply buried in the sand? And what of the unity of the army, al-ready strained? I confess that, in his past form, I have few hopes. Left to himself — that is, unless the Supreme Court overturns the judgment or heavy foreign pressure is applied — I fear that he will go forvard in his tracks.

Soviet UN Move Prompts U.S., Swiss Protests

GENEVA, July 4 (UPI) - A Soviet move to control a key post in the United Nations hierarchy in Geneva provoked Swiss and U.S.

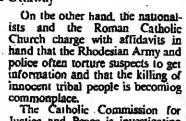

Swiss authorities, in an unusual public statement, said that they were "closely studying" a Soviet request to give diplomatic accredita-tion to Geli Dneprovsky, who has been appointed personnel director at the UN's European headquarters here. Mr. Dneprovsky bas been identified in newspaper reports as a colonel in the KGB.

U.S. Ambassador William van den Heuvel formally protested the appointmeot.

Swiss officials said in Bern that UN Secretary-General Kurt Wal-dheim would be asked about KGB (Soviet secret police) and GRU (Soviet military) agents in top UN jobs, when he visits Switzerland Thursday and Friday.

Boom Brings Out Oklahoma Contrasts

By John M. Crewdson

OKLAHOMA CITY (NYT) -Summer arrived here recently, and residents of this steamy city pre-pared to go underground. Literally underground, because "O.K. City." as it likes to be known, is two cities

Aboveground are the shining glass and steel towers, monuments to Oklahoma's accelerating economic boom, and helow are the tunnels, blocks and blocks of winding, air-conditioned passages that connect most of the major downtown buildings with one another, It is possible for anyone who works downtown to avoid summertime altogether. He leaves an airconditioned house in the morning, drives to work in an air-conditioned automobile, parks in an underground garage, walks through the cool subterranean maze to an air-conditioned office huilding and reverses the process at the end of the day.

It is not even necessary to go outside for luoch or to do a little shopping because the brightly painted, softly carpeted tunnels are lined with restaurants and a variety of shops. There are also a couple of bars, hut there is no telling how much longer they will be in busi-

Liquor by the drink is still illegal in Oklahoma, and for the last couple of months state agents and the local police have been working overtime to close the saloons, arresting bartenders and cocktail waitresses and coofiscating liquor.

Saloons as Clubs

Oklahoma did not repeal prohi-hition until 1959; since then, it has been permissible to take one's own bottle aloog to dinner, or to pur-chase a drink at a private club, but the law is widely flouted. Saloons in the guise of clubs are every-where, and the only criterioo for admission to most of them is that one not look like a member of the

The effort to close them down has provoked much muttering, not just about the inconvenience caused to three-martini lunchers but also about selective enforcement of the liquor laws. The pre-serves of the powerful, like the Petroleum Cluh in Tulsa and the watering holes frequented by state legislators, have so far been uotouched as have the downtown

In the country, anyone who looks or talks differently is certain to be asked eventually, though in a disarmingly friendly manner, where he is from, what he does and why he is there.

Although the questions are prompted by curiosity and caution, not distrust or dislike, they have their roots in the history of Oklahoma as a place that nobody wanted and that was settled by people who had nowhere else to go. Early in the last century, thou-

Heathrow Raid Fails to Uncover Phony Dollars

LONDON, July 4 (AP) — Scot-land Yard detectives and British customs officers working in cooperation with U.S. Treasury agents raided an airliner at Heathrow Airport last night in search of "almost perfect" counterfeit $100 bills.

The counterfeits were said to he part of an estimated $10 million that have flooded into Britain over the last four or five months. The search was of a Nigerian Airways flight from Lagos and Kano.

As the 43 passengers for London disembarked, they were directed to a checkpoint where they and their luggage were examined. The 40 other passengers bound for other destinations were similarly checked in the transit lounge.

They were delayed for about an hour by the checks. No one was held, and apparently no counterfeit bills were found.

Cimarron Badlands as a hideout. Having used the state in the last century as a kind of sociological dumping ground, the outsiders began this century by treating Oklahoma as though it existed merely to give up its resources to the rest of the country — not just its gas and oil, hur everything, from race horses to baseball players. The last is still a sore point, for the state that produced greats ranging from Mickey Mantle and Allie Reynolds to Johnny Bench and Bobby Murcer has never had a major league team of its own.

State's Time Has Come

At long last, however, Oklaho-ma's time seems to have come. The absence of development over the years has left it with abundant clear water to the east, clean air everywhere and low population density With the added factor of highly preferential tax treatment it has be-come a magnet not just for major industry — a hig General Motors plant here is the latest plum — but for commerce as well. Southwesterners have always taken pride in their having had enough sense, unlike the people in Boston and New York, to keep their horses off the dowotown streets. But recently the Oklahoma City police department announced that it was considering a plan to put some of its officers hack on

A department spokesman said that the move was intended to save gasoline and to help the officers maneuver in the downtown area, which he said had become so congested that motorized pairols "sim-ply cannot get around." Just as in Boston and New York, he might have added.

"Il Mattatore" is not new, but it is often very funny, It was shot as long ago as 1960 and is in black and white. It has never been seen in France before and is to open in several Parisian cinemas on July 12.

Vittorio Gassman, that chameleon of an actor, is the enerchameleon of an actor, is the energetic star, portraying an Italian crook, During the film's course he transforms himself into Santa Claus, Hitler, a Polish doctor, a traffic cop, a French client in a shoe shop, a mighty tycoon, a flamenco dancer, a telephone repairman and Greta Garbo. His countless crime include the lifting countless crimes include the lifting of the British crown.

Dino Risi has tricked out his roaming farce with a number of felicitous devices and observations that lend what is a collection of sketches, bright humor, variety and unity. Gassman is more than a quick-change clown like Peter "Interieur d'un Couvent" (at the Sellers. "The Consequence" (at the Danton and the Biarritz in German) was produced by Wolfgang Petersen for Germon television and then was forbidden release. Based on Alexander Ziegler's novel, it tells of a Swiss uctor who is condemned to prison for molesting a minnr (male) and who, while behind bars, attracts the affections of an adolescent son of one of the wardens. On his release he and his underage admirer plan to live together and the actor goes to the youth's father to be granted his hand, so to speak.

In Andre Roussin's "L'Amour Fou." a lover goes to a husband with a request to marry his wife. "L'Amour Fou." however, is a comedy, while "The Consequence" is a tragic tale. It is said to be a true story and it is possible that the film records an actual event, but that, does not make it valid theatrically.

The real resuscitation came through Pierre and Nicole Lefebvre, who wanted to establish themselves as restaurateurs in Par-is, and were enthralled with the challenge. They were young, attractive, energetic and experienced in the matter.

Nicole, a graduate of the hotel school in Bellegarde in the Ain, was the maitre d'hotel of the Vivarois when that three-star establishment first opened. Claude Peyrot had seen her in operation at her first job — the Chapon Fin in Thoissey and asked her to come to Paris. Two years later, Gaston Lenotre (France's No. 1 caterer) admired the manner in which she carved a duck at the Vivarois and urged her to manage his two pastry shops. There she met Pierre, who was the right hand of Mrs. Lenotre in the organization of receptions.

The first colonists hrought the vegetable to America, to Latin America first (Venezuela in 1564). Peru in 1605) and then to North America (Virginie in 1608, Massic chusetts in 1629). The new vegetable appealed to the Indians. parsnips were among the crops de-stroyed by Gen. John Sullivan in 1779 during a retaliatory raid on the Iroquois of western New York;

It never gained popularity there, though in Europe, where it seems to have first appeared in the 17th century, it is often preferred, because its less abundant foliage makes cultivation easier, it grows faster and it obeys the mysterious rule of nature, that round roots usually ripen earlier than long roots.

American eaters, often timid in the face of assertive tastes, may have disliked it because the already strongly scented flavor of the long parsnip becomes even more robust in the round variety. However, no parsnip is avidly sought out these days, either in America or in Europe, perhaps because it is hard to find really good ones. Dollar Falls: Sales Heavy

LONDON. July 4 (AP-DJ) -The dollar, sinking to a postwar low against the yen, managed to stoy just above the "psychological barrier" of 200 yen in agitated foreign exchange dealings in Europe

Centrals banks in Europe and Japun bought around $285 million to help steady the dollar, reliable sources said.

In its first major test of the 200-yen barrier, the dollar fell quickly in the opening hour of European trading to a record 200.40 yen. Dealers reported heavy selling by Mideast, Asian and some European interests. However, widespread profit-taking, especially by West German and Swiss interests, per-mitted the dollar to recoup to 200.80 yeo by the end of the trading day, cut short by the U.S. holi-

The Bank of Japan had bought an estimated $25 million to hold the dollar at 201.325 yen io Tokyo but the rate fell after the authorities withdrew to close at 201.30, down from 203.35 yesterday.

Funds, originating from West Germany and Switzerland, placed in yen receotly to take advantage of an expected depreciation of the dollar, were being rotated back into Deutsche marks and francs, dealers said. This steadled the dollar against the yen around mid-morning here, but it resulted io a sharp rise in the mark and Swiss franc.

The dollar fell 1.8 pfennig to 2.0450 DM — its lowest level since April 17 — despite estimated purchases of $85 million by the Bun-desbank. The central bank also bought around 250 million Belgian francs to keep that currency above its floor against the mark in the joint currency float, or snake.
The Swiss National Bank absorbed apparently $25 million as the dollar fell to its lowest level since it scored a record low of 1.7880 francs on Feb. 23. mean that the government will go into the seven-nation economic summit here in mid-month with still no conclusive evidence of a self-sustaining economic upswing, government officials say.

The industrial production index fell by a seasonally adjusted 1.7 percent from April but was up 0.8 percent from May 1977, according to provisional data. The provisional index of new orders to the manufacturing industry fell by a seasonally adjusted 1.2 percent in the month but climbed by 3.2 percent from n year earlier.

Although the officials caution against overvaluing one mooth's figures, they admit there is now no hope of achieving the country's 3.5percent growth target this year un-less further impetus is provided.

The fall in production was experienced in most sectors of the econ-omy, with only the food service area showing any improvement, the ministry said.

Part of the drop was caused by an upward revision of April's index to 116 from a preliminary 115 previously. "For a final judgement oo production, we will have to await whether and to what extent the May result will have to be corrected," the mioistry added.

The production index, based on 1970 equals 100, stood at a prelimioary 114 in May against April's 116 and 113 in May 1977.

The decline in order inflow to manufacturing was due to a sharp .7-percent fall in orders received from domestic sources while orders from foreign customers climbed 1.5 percent. The order drop primarily occurred in the capital and consumer goods sectors, the ministry

The overall order index stood at a preliminary 157 in May com-pared with 159 in April (revised downward from 160) and 152 in May 1977. The domestic orders index stood at a preliminary 143 in May against 147 in April and May 1977's 137. The iodex of foreign orders stood at a preliminary 202 in May compared with 199 in April and 201 in may 1977.

The figures are unusually important as they provide the last indica-tion of how the country's economy is faring before the end-July cabi-net meeting at which the government has promised it will consider pressure in the summit to take sumulative measures. Despite the May decline, the overall statistical picture has still improved from the first quarter, with ordering and production in April-May up 11/2 and 2 percent, respectively, com-decided at the summit.

Sweden's Iron Mines Brace for Challenge

By Jonathan Kandell

KIRUNA. Sweden (NYT) — Well within the Arctic Circle, deep inside a mountoin, more than 4,000 Swedish miners and engineers have been extracting high-grade iron ore for decades. The project, which until recently was the main supplier to the blast furnaces of Western Europe, resembles not so much a mine as an underground civilization from the realm of science fiction. Hundreds of yards beneath the surface chauffeur-driven Mercedes-Benz cars whisk past heavy-duty trucks and buildozers along a two-lane asphalt network that is four times the length of the 44-mile-long Stockholm subway system.

Three-pronged drills the size of Sherman tanks, each handled by a single miner, rip open new lodes of iron. A caravan of 17 unmanned trains, controlled by computers and cruising more than half a mile underground, collect the thousands of tons of ore and deposit them into crushers. Other computer-guided machines separate the waste material, turn the ore into pellets and shoot them to the surface. There, another railway system transports the ore to a port in Norvay for shipment to the steel factories oo the Contioent.

The Kiruna iroo ore mines have been called the eighth wonder of the world. But like the pyramids, the Taj Mahal and the other wonders, they may be turning into moouments of a bygooe era.

Brazilian Ore No matter how much the Swedes auto-mate their Arctic mines, they can no longer compete against cheaper ore from oew producers in the developing countries, particularly Brazil. The decline of Kiruna bas been exacerbated by high labor costs and the sluggish world economy of recent years. These factors are affecting a number of so-called traditional European industries.

Automated Wonder Hurt by Brazil's Ore

Over the last decade more than a million West European workers have lost jobs in mining, shipbuilding, steel and textile industries because of slack demand and steeper competition from developing countries. In all, there are more than seveo million unemployed workers in Western Europe - double the 1972 total.

Perhaps nowhere has the rise of competition from the emerging nations of the Third World been felt as acutely as io Kiruna.

'As recently as 1969, we were the leading iron ore exporters to the world," said Bengt Lovkvist, director of the Kiruna pelletizing plant who is temporarily in charge of marketing. "The Canadian ores — our closest competitors — were mostly sold in the Unit-ed States. We saw little of them in Europe. And we pretty much cootrolled prices and supplies in the European market."

Prices Falling

In 1969, the Swedes were exporting 30 million tons of iron ore, while the Brazilians were selling 20 million tons. Last year, the Swedes were down to 21 million tons, while the Brazilians had catapulted to 73 million tons.

"The Brazilians now set the prices," Mr.
Lovkvist said ruefully. "And those prices have been going down."
So far down in fact that Kiruna has been operating at a deficit for the last four years, and is now losing more than $400,000 a day. LKAB, the state-owned company that runs the mines, has 15 million tons of ore in stock, waiting to be sold.

The key to Brazil's success is low production cost. Their ore, found close to the surface, is mined in open pits, maioly in the Minas Gerais area, which has a well-developed transportation system to Atlantic ports. The Brazilians cannot yet match Kiruna's technological virtuosity, but the salaries they pay are a lifth of the $1,500 a month that Swedish miners get.

What irks some officials here is that the Brazilians have outmanuveured the Swedes in marketing their ore. "The Brazilians fi-nanced the expansion of their mines through long-term contracts with the European steel producers," said Bertil Thorwid, the purchasing manager for the Kiruna operation. "We followed our usual comfortable setup.

We would meet onee a year with the European steel people and set prices on a one-year contract. We always thought we would be protected by close access to our markets."

Mining Innovations

But the Swedes have not stood still. They maintain that a series of technological inno-vations has permitted them to lower their price structure over the last decade. They have doubled their loading capacity to 12,000 tons on hour at their port installations in Narvik. They have replaced compressed-air drills with more efficient hydrau-lic rigs. They have brought in shovels that can scoop up 15 tons at a time.

There is talk of new magnetic separaters and an advance pelletizing plant that could regain the favor of the European steel pro-ducers by delivering an even higher quality

But as Mr. Lovkvist remarked. "The Brazilians are not standing pat either. They could catch up to us if they made an effort. The inescapable reality is that the deeper the Swedes dig for their ore, the more expensive and uncompetitive it becomes. It costs just as much to haul the ore to the surface as it does to transport it 100 miles across the

20 Senators Rebuke Steel Tariff Offers

By James L. Rowe Jr.

WASHINGTON, July 4 (WP)— A group of 20 steel-state secutors have warned the White House that unless a separate trade ngreement is negotiated for steel. President Carter will have difficulties getting "congressional approval" of the multilateral trode agreement now being hammered out in Geneva.

The warning was triggered by reports that the administration has offered of the talks to cut its steel tariffs by 40 percent.

Administration aides say the 40-percent number being put forth by industry officials is wrong but de-cline to say what or how much the United States has offered to cut tariffs citing the secrecy of the tariffs, citing the secrecy of the negotiations.

Since the average U.S. tariff on steel imports is only 6 percent, a 40- percent reduction would mean tariffs dropping to about 3.6 perceot. Iodustry and union officials have been pressuring the administration for a separate agreement among the world's steel-producing nations that would set trade rules prohibiting dumping and export

U.S., European and Japanese negotiators hope to have a brood agreement on international export subsidies, which should resolve some of the iodustry's problems, in time for the Bonn economic summit July 16-17.

A Broader Structure

The Organization for Economic Cooperatioo and Development, made up of 24 Western industrial powers, has been holding talks for the past year on steel trading. But U.S. steelmakers insist on a broader, more formal structure that includes less developed countries as well, such as South Korea and Brazil which are accounting for more and more of the world's steel outpressing the business community or

In a letter to Robert Strauss, the president's special trade representative, obtained by The Washington Post, the senators warned the administration that the johs and profits lost as a result of last year's devastating experience make it imperative that you impress upon representatives of steel-exporting countries the need for an international steel-monitoring agreement.
Commitments must be obtained which will provide the hasis for a steel problems and not merely an agreement to continue discus-

Senote sources said the legislators are becoming concerned that the only leverage the United States has in getting worldwide agreement on steel trade is its tariffs. "If we give it away in tariffs, we'll have no leverage to get anything in return, source said.

March, according to a vote today at the National Unioo of Mineworkers' annual conference. Yesterday, union president Joe

In related news, Britain will raise salaries by 31 percent for chairmen of nationalized industries and other senior public servants. Prime Min-

A review body recommended the increases, which will be phased in with a 10-percent rise this year and the rest by April 1 1980, because many senior public servants had not received salary increases for some time. Mr. Callaghan said faila "serious impact" on morale.

This country has on oreo of more than 8,512 million squore kilometres (3,287 million squore miles) and 116 million inhabitants.

So its potential as a morket is enormous. Here are some facts which should be of interest. In the lost few years the growth rate of Brazil's PNB has been among the highest in the world. Per capita income reached 1,460 dollars by the end of 1977.

It's also a country with the most varied types of climate, suitable for growing crops of both temperate and tropical regions.

Agriculture activity grew by 48.7% between 1970 and

It's a country notable for the vigour of its private enterprise, whose development is being ossisted by large projects under government supervision. Industry is developing rapidly, stimulated by o 150 Mw hydro-electric

The fast growing petrochemical industry is ready to supply the entire domestic morket, from now on, while the shipbuilding industry produced o total of 854,000 DWT in 1976. And the present production of the aircraft industry, which began in 1969, olready positions it as Na. 6 in the western world.

INVESTMENT ADVISORS, PORTFOLIO MANAGERS AND SALES EXECUTIVES.

We have consistently shown that commodity investment is profitable for both investor and representative. Proof: Our average net return to investor for the first six months of 1978 is over 60% and representatives share in these profits as well as receiving commission.

Why not take the opportunity of becoming a part of the most rapidly expanding commodity brokerage firm on the international market?

A Director's Personal Experience in Opera and Theater

some detail in this book ranging from such generally acknowledged successes as his "La Traviata" and "Pelleas et Mclisande" to his infamous "Don Giovaoni," which Corsuro deals with in a chapter called "The Night the Roof Fell

It is, of course, not the hits but a few such misses as the "Don Giovanni" that some opera critics allude to when they ask, in effect, whether the productions of Frank Corsaro have any redeeming social value. Trained in the Actors Studio tradition of confronting the work as a living organism rather that as o museum piece. Corsaro upset a lot of teacups when he broke intn

Although he did not invent the idea of sex and violence in opera, as Julius Rudel, the City Opera's geoeral director, points out in a prefare. Corsaro oever could be accused of overlooking the possibil-ities these popular subjects offer for keeping an audience at attentioo. It might seem an impossible chal-leoge, for instance, to overstress the sexual aspect in "Don Giovanni." but Corsaro managed it. Hc has enjoyed tap dancing along the line that separates innovation and tradi-tion-breaking from vulgarity, thumbing his nose of his detractors. Unfortunately, he has tripped ofteo enough to keep his reputation alive as one of the modern theatertrained directors who place visual effects and sensation over the music. Corsaro, who believes that be understands how to balance the elements of opera in a way that would have appealed to such reformers as Gluck and Wagner, demonstrates his methods by laking the reader through several of his productions and showing how his conception develops into the finished article. He is at his best when working oneto-one with a singer, and his style reveals itself with veristic clarity in a chapter on Sharpless, the usually bland and enigmatic American consul in "Madam Butterfly."

Corsaro's explanations of how such multimedia productions as "The Makropoulos Affair" and "A Village Romeo and Juliet" are put together also are valuable, as is his discussion of stylization and the delicate relationship between sing-ing and acting. After 20 years of opera direction, he has an insider's view that is worth paying attention

But Corsaro's personality is not easy to take for many people, and his hook precisely reflects the man so many critics love to hate. Com-ing from the New York theater world, though hy way of Yale Dra-ma School, he has a tough-guy facade that shows itself in his writing. which is a strange mixture of Jim-argot.

He doesn't look at a subject, he takes "a hard gander" at it. Then, a moment later, he tries out a more high-flown approach: "The ignitiog cause of pique and reseorment from the various critical bodies lies in the personal quality of vision (subjectivity) brought to my inter-pretation of operatic literature." His metaphors cao be a bit rich. too: "I approach each work, old or new, as if regarding a clear, clean space. The most thumbnailed musical chestnut becomes virgin territory; no matter how rouged or battered by time, each time is the first time — for both of us!"

FRANK Corsaro has directed more than 70 opera productions, including some 25 for the New York City Opera. He has selected a dozen of these to discuss in some detail in this book, ranging mind the reader of cettain characters. teristics of Corsaro the director.

Perhaps he has never quite decided and whether he is on the side of the art of show business, and thus condemned to be opera's danging man. Then again, if he ever should resolve that problem, assuming it is a real problem and not a semantic one, he might turn out to be just another tasteful, uoobjectionable workman. We already have plent of ose in opera, so it is probably just as well that we take Corsaro just as he is, hubris and all.

A Bit of Americana Nears Finish Line In Bygone Goshen By James Tuite

GOSHEN, N.Y., July 4 (NYT) — The sign over a decaying railroad station reads, "Welcome tn Goshen, Home of the Hall of Fame of the Trotter." Across the street the old Occidental Hotel, opened in 1841 when the first locomotive steamed into town, stands as a monument to a bygone

The bar under the eaves of the Occidental is shut, with no one willing to lease it for $600 a month. Sawyer's Cluthing Store is having a going-out-of-husiness sale (50 percent off). Manny and Sal Triggin are still cutting hair (color it gray now) in their shop at the hotel, but they admit that Goshen has changed.

That's Goshen, which starts with G, and that rhymes with T, and that stands for Trouble. There's trouble in this upstate River City. But, while River City was worried about pool tables and the eventual arrival of "horse-race gambling." Goshen's problem is that horse racing, or at the very least the gambling that for many is the sport's raison d'etre, is on the

The Nation's Oldest

When the last bet is cashed in the gathering dusk at Historic Track on Friday, at the conclusion of the Grand Circuit meeting that began Sunday, an era with end. The tote board will blink its final figures and expire. Parimutuel betting will be buried in the infield of the nation's oldest active track, in this village that spawned trotting (on borseback then; racing to harness came later) as a sport.

E. Roland Harriman was in trotting when satisfaction was the only reward, and he has decreed from his grave that to dust the parimuruel machines, which arrived here in 1940, shall return. The man who subsidized this vestige of Americana that for one carnival week each July has brought the Grand Circuit, the traveling show of the country's greatest trotters and pacers, died last February. The Harriman Foundation said that the scion of the railroad family wanted the track, which he owned and passed on to the foundation, turned into a "recreational, cultural or educational facility but did not rule ont amateur racing, which was very

What Harriman did not like was the commercial bent of harness racing today, and he apparently preferred to let Race Week lapse rather than have it follow the path of the profit-oriented meets. Some matinee racing in future years may lure the children and the folk who run the many horse-breeding farms that dot this bucolic area, but it will never be the same. With the parimutuel license lapsed, the words of Frank Gilroy, who created his Pulitzer Prize-winning play, "The Subject Was Roses," in a Goshen loft, will have a hollow echo "I glimpse an America I read about but oever really thought existed.

"It's almost too ideal except for that shabby patch where the colored live. Lawns become parking lots; churches serve lunch, every room for miles around is rented. A year's excitement crammed into several days and then the town resumes its doze."

Go With the Flow

Charlie Leerhsen, writing in Classic magazine, summed up the excitement of people exposed to Gosben-style racing for the first time:

"Presented with the spectacle of horses circling under natural light, they giggle. Handed a program that contains little beyond the names of entrants, they squawk. Advised via the public address system of numerous and grave errors in said program, they howl. And the gaucheries continue -as the win. place and show payoffs refuse to line up in logical order; as a driver in one of the amateur races tumbles from his sulky; as spectators ootice additional, unannounced misprints - until at last they find the rhythm of Historic, and go with it."

But that's Goshen. For five days the gaucheries were endured and even enjoyed, and for those five days this village between New York City and the Catskills - close enough to the city for hundreds to commute, far enough away for an upstate Iwang to predominate - became the center of the billion-dollar barness-racing industry.

Del Miller and Stanley Dancer, among other noted horsemen, have offered to help save Historic's heritage. Leo Doobin, president of Monticello Raceway, has offered an industry plan to the State Racing and Wagering Board, But the foundation has stood firm.

There's no doubt about it," said George Passenbarger, the general manager of Historic and a vice president of the Hall of Fame of the Trotter. "The foundation is reflecting Mr. Harriman's wishes. He agreed before his death that the parimutuel meeting was impractical and oul of character for the track.

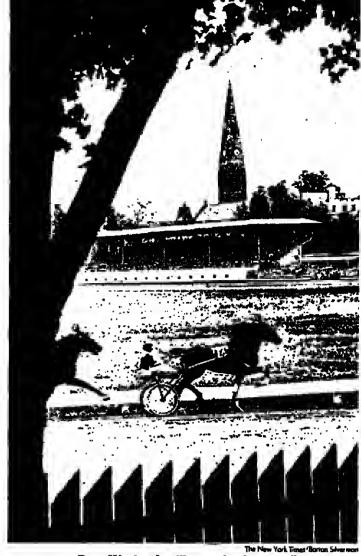

And there is a widespread belief that without the betting no meeting can survive. Paffenbarger was standing among the gray benches of Historie Track, folded upward too late to escape the mark of passing pigeons. Behind him was the once-a-year tote board, gap-toothed where numbers will be installed for their final appearance.

Various Options

"We've had some people express concern and disappointment over the end of Race Week." he said, "and we're trying to work out an arrangement for matince racing. We'd like to provide an opportunity for people with quality horses to come in once a year. We're talking about having some New York State Sire Stakes here, but they'd be nonbetting."

He recalled that Harriman had liked to joke that the lines outside the Indies' rooms (there are only four of them) were longer than the lines at the hetting windows. The final meeting will attract perhaps 11,000 people, about a third of them today, the Fourth of July.

Outside the hotel, Henry Eckerson, wearing a tattered railroad cap made long before the Erie Lackawanna Railway became part of Conrail, chuckled at the prospect of losing Historic. He was philosophical: "Well.

Race Week; "It will never be the same."

He was referring also to Good Time Park, home of the Hamhletonian from 1930 to 1956 but overgrown now with weeds and regularly stripped of its hardware by vandals. Some horses are still stabled there, but the track is essentially a ghost of Hambletooians past. With first Good Time and now Historie out of the picture, the Grand Circuit will lose visitation rights here after 66 of its 105 years.

Thirty-five years before the Grand Circuit began, bringing with it the great names of the sport - from the mighty Greyhound to Silk Stockings and Speedy Rodney - Historie Track was operating in this land of milk

A flowering economy had forced the trotting horses off Main Street and onto the new racecourses, including two built for thoroughbreds. Earlier still, Tom Brooks, the justice of the peace, cleared the roadway of traffic so the horses could race in town. The fast road race, a historian wrote, "was commonly regarded not as a religion but as a disease." The farmers coming into town would hook up in duels from Denniston's gardens to the big elm tree in the village square.

Ice cream sodas went for a nickel at Barney Clark's, which also featured oyster stew. There were no trifectas or exactas to fix at that time, but as early as 1776, the records show, a John Thompson was done in hy two men from Blooming Grove after having lost a £10 stake. "They felled Thompson after a quarrel ensued," the historian inscribed, "escaped, and were never apprehended." Today a sense of history pervades Goshen's tree-shaded streets, enqueh distract a visitor from the erosion of once-proud homes and shops. But the years have not stemmed the clannishness of many old-time residents. "I've been here 30 years, and they're just starting to accept me," said Jean Musgrave, a widow who has reared three children in Goshen and serves as a receptionist for the Hall of Fame of the Trotter.

U.S. Grant Himself

The Hall sits primly a few furlongs down Main Street from the cubistdesigned Orange County Government Center and next to a former harn S. Grant watched trotting races

Philip Pines, director of the museum, sighed resignedly among the memorahilia in paneled sanctuaries and said. "This is not the end of the world for Goshen. He said that the National Park Service might want to take over Historic Track, designated a national historic landmark in 1967. He presumed that amateur racing would be continued, in a park-like setting. "But next year," he said, "July Fourth will simply come and go. It will never be the same."

For many of the young people, Goshen's link to the past has little meaning. "I want to leave this town as soon as I can," said Tom Murphy, whose grandfather drove trotting horses and whose father commutes daily Manhattan. Murphy. 21, reflects the young thinking here.

For some others, Gilroy summed things up in "Memories of Goshen," ritten in the late 60's for the United States Trotting Association: "Sunshine, heat, racing, crowds that care a little.

'They still park cars on the lawn and the churches serve lunch. "It's beautiful but it's not the same.

"I blame it on the war, which makes all our pleasures, mine anyway, seem irrelevant. "My wife says it's age."

National Football League will open their rookie training camp at Bis-cayne College in North Miami, the first NFL training center to swing into action. Temperature and humidity counts there that day will probably add up to more than 180.

Starting in July

The Dolphins will play the Philadelphia Eagles in the first exhibi-tion game, the Hall of Fame contest at Canton, Ohio, on July 29. Miami's veterans will report to Biscayne College on July 13.

New rules agreed to by the Players Association and the NFL Management Council state that seasoned players need not report to training camps until 15 days remain before the team's first preseason game. Since most veterans dislike training camps and the twicedaily practices in the heat, the 15day rule will probably be widely observed.

A Dream of Summer

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK — A long time ago
I lived in a crossroads village

Baker would sit on the bank and fish with earth worms. One day we killed a copperhead which was basking on a rock near-by. That was unusual.

The heat of summer was mellow and produced sweet scents which lay in the air so damp and rich you could almost taste them. Mornings smelled of purple wisteria, after-noons of the wild roses which turnbled over stone feaces and evenings of nonevsuckle.

Even by standards of that time it was a primitive place. There was no electricity. Roads were unpaved. In our house there was no plumbing. The routine of summer days was shaped by these deficiencies. Lacking electric lights, one went early to bed and rose while the dew was still in the grass. Kerosene lamps were cleaned and polished in an earlymorning hubbub of women, and children were sent to the spring for fresh water.

This afforded a chance to see whether the crayfish population had multiplied. Later, a trip to the outhouse would afford a chance to daydream in the Sears, Roebuck Catalogue, mostly about shotguns and bicycles.

With no electricity, radio was not available for pacifying the young. One or two people did have radios that operated on mail-order batteries, about the size of a present-day car battery, but these were not for children, though occasionally you might be invited in to hear "Amos

The men drifted back with the falling sun, steaming with heat and faligue, and washed in tin basins with water hauled in buckets from the spring. I knew a few of their secrets, such as who kept his whisky hidden in a mason jar behind the lime barrel, and what they were really doing when they excused themselves from the kitchen and stepped out into the orchard and stayed out there laughing too hard.

I did not know what that meant.

Bob Dylan as Explorer of His Own Work

By Michael Zwerin

DARIS. July 4 (IHT) - Bob Dylan's concert at the Pavillon de Paris last night was more a miracle than a concert. It is easy to exaggerate the importance of such hyperstar events, but when some 7.000 are lifted off the ground by an invisible force, it can be called miraculous.

You go to a Dylan concert these days thinking . . . oh well, just the same old beautiful songs again. But they turn out to be not at all the same. They are so much more. He has begun to explore the subtleties of his own material.

Published sheet music of popular tunes generally provides only the barest harmonic outlines. There may be three cbords indicated for an entire tune, where actually 14 are required. In fact, Dylan once accompanied himself like that. Clang, clang, clang. Three chords n tune. It worked anyway because he has always been somehow miraculous.

tt is as if he is only now completing his songs. Far from having become tired, they are refreshed. Expanded. Refurbished. He seems to approach them now as a musician rather than an ego-tripper. He does not pos-ture on stage; if you didn't know it was Dylan up there, you might think he was the lead singer in somebody else's band.

Current Band

His current band is tight, strong, spirited, swinging. It sounds like it was put together by Motown. Plenty of percussion, heavy gui-tars, boosted bass lines, saxophones, a violin and a chorus of three Supreme-like women wearing white gowns.

They do "Blowin' in the Wind" as a sort of hymn. a choir of angels humming behind the preacher. He croons "I Want You" like a fifties torch singer. "Ballad of a Thin Man" has become a low-down blues. "It's All Right Ma (I'm Only Bleeding)" could be James Brown number. "Just Like a Woman" sounds like a spiritual, "All I Really Want to Do" like a march and "All Along the Watchtower" has more to do with the Jimi Hendrix version than Dylan's own original.

Visually, it is all so slick some critics have complained that the current Dylan outfit is: too Las Vegasy."

But he has always been ahead of his critics. As they were getting used to his out-of-tune folksy twang, he electrified his guitar. He was booed. He turned to Country and Western, before it became a fad. (Now that it is, there was not one Country and West-

PEOPLE: Lionel Hampton reces 50 Years of Good Vibes

Lionel Hampton celebrated 50 years in music by playing some vibes and drums and even a touch of piano with a Newport Jazz Festival all-star band at New York's Carnegie Hall. Hampton thanked his enthusiastic audience toward the end of the concert. Blowing kisses into a microphone, he told them: "The boys in the band love you like mad — just like I do." Manhattan Borough President Andrew Stein declared a Lionel Hampton Day in New York, and the Carnegie Hall concert was a tribute. Joining the 70-year-old Hampton were, among others, pin-nist Ray Bryant, drummer Panama Francis. bassist Chubby Jackson. trumpeter Joe Newman and tenor saxophonist Arnett Cobb. Pianist Teddy Wilson, who played with Hampton in the 1930s in the Benny Goodman band, joined the party alter the intermission, as did claricetist Bob Wilber. During a brief nonmusical interlude a music-industry representative mentioned that only recently Hampton's theme song "Flying Home" — had been played on the air for the one-millionth time. The band then started working toward the two-million mark. The audience stomped, applauded and cheered, and Hampton obliged with a few extra choruses.
